4600 Pediatric Solid Organ Transplantation in the 21st Century

PAS/ASP/NASPGHAN/LWPES
Topic Symposium

Chairs: Ellis D. Avner, President, ASPN, Mitchell B. Cohen, President, NASPGHAN and Mark A. Sperling, President, LWPES

Organ transplantation remains the final therapeutic option for many patients with chronic diseases of many organ systems. Extraordinary advances in molecular and cellular biology have led to new immunological approaches which make the holy grail of immune tolerance a reality for the 21st century. This symposium will focus on the exciting advances in four areas of pediatric solid organ transplantation: pancreatic islet transplantation as a cure for diabetes, hepatic transplantation for chronic hepatic and metabolic disease, renal transplantation for end stage renal disease and small bowel transplantation for previously untreatable catastrophic bowel injury. This symposium is proudly sponsored by the American Society of Pediatric Nephrology (ASP/N), the North American Society of Pediatric Gastroenterology, Hepatology and Nutrition (NASPGHAN), and the Lawson Wilkins Pediatric Endocrine Society (LWPES).
